

BSB41412 Certificate IV in WHS

RPL Application

RPL (recognition of prior learning) is an assessment only pathway to a nationally recognised qualification. During the RPL assessment previously learnt skills and knowledge are assessed against current national standards. Candidates in this assessment process provide evidence that matches to the evidence requirements of the 10 units that make up the qualification.

Our RPL process starts with the candidate completing an RPL application.

- ❖ Please read the following information that identifies the evidence required for the units that you need to provide evidence for. Consider your current work experience in work health and safety and document the specific evidence that would show us that you are already competent against that unit. Please note you need to address each of the dot points listed.
- ❖ Please be specific with the evidence you would be able to provide. The assessor needs to get a clear picture of your current WH&S skills and knowledge.
- ❖ The first part of the RPL application is general information about your current WHS role. Please complete all sections.
- ❖ The second part lists the 10 units you need to provide evidence for. It lists the specific evidence requirements for each unit. This information has been taken from the evidence guides in each of the unit.
- ❖ On the following 2 pages you will find 2 examples, one effective and one ineffective. These examples are provided to give you some ideas on the level of detail you need to provide when completing this RPL application. The more you can tell us, the easier it will be for the assessor to determine if RPL would be a suitable pathway for you.

Effective Example of how to complete the Application – In this example the candidate has linked what they do directly to the unit requirements and lists evidence that they can provide that clearly links to the unit requirements. All dot points have been addressed. This would indicate that the candidate is suitable for the RPL pathway for this unit.
